The planning and property data ecosystem in Ireland

Prof. Rob Kitchin

Maynooth University Social Sciences Institute and Department of Geography

The Data Stories project

Investigating the underlying evidence base for housing, property and planning

These data are central to how places are understood and managed

They inform government policy, shape public perception, and guide billions of euros of investment relating to land use and development, public and private housing, homelessness, commercial real estate, and infrastructure

There is a wide variety of planning and property data held across numerous stakeholders, some of it made available as open data, though most of it is closed

Planning and property data ecosystem

Land

Land use, coverage, conditions, ownership, etc.

Planning

Development plans, zoning, permissions, enforcements, etc.

Stock

Numbers, type, floor area, beds, amenities, site size, Energy rating, vacancy, dereliction, obsolescence, architectural style, etc.

Household/population demographics

Size, composition, socio-economic status, migration, etc.

Housing/development finance

Loans, mortgages, interest rates, taxes, grants, etc.

Housing management (LAs/landlords)

Stock, tenants, payments, maintenance, etc.

Construction activity

Units, commencements, stages, completions, etc.

Employment and materials

Data issues in the planning system

- Variances in how systems are configured
- Variances in workflow across systems
- Variances in how the same systems are being used by different LAs
- Variances in how LAs and individual operatives do data work
- Variances in data recording (classes, units, etc.)
- Lack of consistency with how data are categorised across systems and across local authorities
- Just because fields are standard does not mean data entered are
- Lots of potential issues with system flow, error, potential points of failure
- Lack of consistent IDs that allow tracking across IT systems/pipeline

Key issues across data ecosystem

- Access and openness
- Data continuity (time), stability (definition) and consistency (across agencies)
- Interoperability: indexical data and statistical geographies
- Gaps: scope and coverage
- Spatial/temporal resolution
- Data quality and accessible metadata
- Representativeness and error: extent data reflects reality
- Methodological transparency and opacity of data systems
- Data disputes (e.g., vacancy, commencements, completions, build costs, number of landlords, homelessness)
- Capacities, skills, resourcing

Potential value

- Yes, there are lots of issues
- But there is also an enormous amount of useful data hidden and locked in systems – across state, business and civil organisations
- Question is how to improve and open those data?
- First step is to:
 - chart the data ecosystem – within systems and how data flows and is transformed across systems
 - Understand what the various issues are and work out how to fix them
- That's what we're trying to do on the Data Stories project

'But I'm not actually behind with my rent right now, am I?'

'I'm afraid you're three days late. This is the third month in a row you've been late. In that sense you're a risk to the City and there are others on the housing waiting list who deserve city-supported housing.'

'So, you're going to evict us because of what some bullshit algorithm thinks might happen?'

'That's one way of looking at it.'

'One way! It's the only way. I've a wife and three kids. Where are we meant to go?'

'That is your issue, Mr Jenkins. There are a wide variety of other housing options in the city from short term and long-term private rental through to home ownership.'

'And homelessness!'

'We don't tolerate homelessness, Mr Jenkins.'
